

72 items added to the blacklist

Compared: mod_ahbot_HybridC_merged.conf → mod_ahbot.conf.txt
Result: 32,981 → 33,053 blacklisted IDs. Exactly 72 additions; no removals.

Important: These additions alone do not prove the gold exploits were closed. The blacklist restricts bot seller supply; it is not a buyer denylist.

Total: $40 + 16 + 15 + 1 = 72$ added IDs. These groups describe the items; they are not counts of verified exploit fixes.

What this proves: you added these 72 items to the blacklist.

What it does not prove: that vendor resale, container conversions or milling exploits were closed. Buyer valuation and other item sources still matter.

Why the blacklist is not a full fix

The key distinction: the bot sells and buys through separate logic.

Seller side: these blacklist settings stop the bot selecting the listed item IDs for new generated auctions. They control what the bot supplies to the auction house.

Buyer side: the checked buyer logic does not use these seller-blacklist settings as an item denylist. A player can still offer an otherwise auction-eligible item, and the bot may buy it if its pricing, funds and other purchase checks allow it.

Not a global item ban: a blacklist entry does not remove an NPC vendor's stock, stop crafting or milling, or generally prevent players from listing tradeable items. Blocking the bot as a seller is different from blocking it as a customer.

Vendor resale — 40 vendor-category additions

The route: buy an item from an NPC → list it on the auction house → have the bot buy it for more than the acquisition cost and AH cut.

What your additions change: the bot stops generating its own auctions for these 40 IDs. That does not interrupt the NPC-to-player supply step, and it does not make the buyer refuse those IDs.

What the current audit found: 25 of these 40 additions still appear in the expanded 108-item vendor-opportunity scan using your current config. Coarse Thread (2320), Copper Rod (6217) and Light Parchment (39354) are examples. They are blacklisted on the seller side but still have an identified buyer-price opportunity in that scan.

Those 25 are possible profitable routes under the audited assumptions, not 25 guaranteed sales. The scan uses undiscounted NPC purchase prices, purchase-pack sizes and a 5% AH cut. Buyer rolls, evaluation, available funds, stock and access still matter. Heavy Silken Thread (8343), for example, needs a favourable buyer roll. The other 15 vendor-category additions are not thereby proven safe or proven exploits.

What would address this route instead?

A buyer-side rule would need to refuse the affected purchases or constrain payment enough that the specific resale route is no longer profitable after costs. That must account for stack sizes and applicable NPC prices. Merely adding more seller-blacklist IDs does not do this.

Such a rule can also affect legitimate sales. A price cap cannot universally eliminate profit on items acquired for free or unusually cheaply, and an item-ID rule does not by itself know where a player obtained the item. No new buyer rule or vendor-guard patch is assumed installed here.

Evidence and limits

These explanations use your uploaded current config, the saved unmodified module source, the pinned AzerothCore world baseline, and the completed vendor and milling checks. They are not a live-worldserver certification or a fresh profitability test for every one of the 72 items.

Milling: the buyer route remains

15 added pigment IDs do not block the herb-to-pigment conversion.

The route: obtain herbs cheaply → mill five herbs → list the resulting pigments → sell those pigments to the bot.

What your additions change: the bot no longer generates its own auctions for those 15 pigment IDs. That can remove direct bot-supplied pigment stock. It does not stop a player making pigments from herbs, nor does it make the buyer refuse the result.

In the checked current config, none of the 45 milling input IDs is blacklisted, while all 15 resolved pigment output IDs are blacklisted. Herb availability still depends on the seller's other rules, stock or other sources. The important point is that the added pigment exclusions do not themselves cut off the herb input route.

A concrete current-config counterexample

The earlier audit checked Silverleaf (765) → Alabaster Pigment (39151). Alabaster Pigment is one of your 72 additions. The audited milling loot can produce two Alabaster Pigments from five Silverleaf.

Illustrative completed-sale calculation:

- Five Silverleaf: use the audit's conservative input budget of 795 copper.
- Two Alabaster Pigments: list for 500 copper each, or 1,000 copper total.
- After a 5% AH cut: receive 950 copper.
- Net against that input budget: $950 - 795 = 155$ copper (1 silver, 55 copper).

The checked pigment buyer-value endpoints are 544–781 copper per item. A 500-copper unit listing is below that entire computed range. The seller blacklist does not make the buyer reject it. This shows why the pigment additions alone are not a proof that the milling route was closed.

What this example does and does not establish

The arithmetic and pricing were verified in a standalone C++ check, not a live server run. It is conditional on obtaining the herbs within that budget, performing the milling and completing the sale. It does not promise immediate purchases, an unlimited herb supply or a fixed income per hour.

The deposit is returned on a successful sale, so it is not deducted again in the calculation above. Failed or cancelled auctions may lose deposits. A player still needs the required profession capability and access to the inputs.

What would need checking to close the route?

The input cost and the buyer's payment for all possible outputs must be considered together. Possible controls include restricting bot-supplied inputs, revising buyer valuation or refusing selected output purchases. Each has gameplay and market trade-offs. Blacklisting the output only on the seller side does not perform those checks.

A missing explicit price is not a buyer refusal

The audit also established that removing an explicit item-price entry leaves runtime fallback valuation available. Thus, removing a pigment's explicit value as well as blacklisting its seller supply still does not guarantee that the buyer will stop paying for it.

Containers, Honey and the verdict

Loot containers — 16 additions

The route being addressed: obtain a loot-bearing item cheaply → open it → sell or otherwise realise the value of its contents. Profit, if any, depends on the input price, random contents, output values and selling costs.

This is where a seller exclusion can help directly. If an exploit depends on buying one of these containers from newly generated bot auctions, preventing the bot from supplying that input cuts that particular source. All 16 of your added container IDs pass the other tested seller-template filters, so their explicit blacklist entries add a restriction at that stage.

Why that is not proof of universal closure: the blacklist does not establish that players cannot obtain containers elsewhere, does not change their loot tables and does not cap what the buyer pays for their contents. The comparison also does not establish what happened to previously created auctions or player-held stock; those require a separate check.

The 16-item count is not evidence that each container had a profitable exploit. For each claimed route, a proper test would need its actual availability and input cost, the loot probabilities and quantities, output prices, relevant trade restrictions and the buyer's completed-sale behavior.

Honey (44853) — the remaining addition

Honey has a positive duration of 604800 seconds (seven days) in the checked item database. The existing seller duration filter already rejects it. The normal auction handler also rejects duration-bearing items.

Therefore, Honey's added blacklist entry duplicates an existing restriction under this baseline. Its addition is real, but it is not evidence of a newly closed auction-resale exploit. A custom server with different item data would require a separate assessment.

The accurate conclusion

Verified: you added 72 IDs, with none removed, between the merged config and your current config.

Vendor resale: seller blacklisting does not block NPC supply or buyer purchases; 25 of the 40 vendor-category additions retain identified opportunities in the current scan.

Milling: blacklisting the 15 pigments does not stop milling inputs being converted into outputs the buyer still values; the documented Silverleaf example remains a counterexample to blanket closure.

Containers: the 16 exclusions can block a specific bot-supplied input source, but do not establish that every container route or alternative source is closed.

Honey: its entry is redundant with an already-active duration restriction in the checked baseline.

Bottom line: these are 72 confirmed blacklist additions, not 72 independently verified exploit fixes. Some exclusions can be useful supply controls. Their usefulness should not be confused with proof that all gold-making routes have been eliminated.

No configuration, item data, price setting or module source was changed when preparing this PDF.

The complete blacklist audit

RECHECKED EDITION / 33,053 IDS / UNPATCHED CONFIG

Yes—most blacklist entries are not separate gold-exploit fixes.

This edition rechecks every configured ID and the other seller-template filters. The main blacklist counts are unchanged. It updates the vendor-exposure cross-reference from the older 90-item scan to the expanded 108-item scan: 33 blacklisted opportunities, with ten registry labels updated. No blacklist IDs or prices were changed.

Verified against the checked baseline	Count
Configured explicit blacklist IDs	33,053
Existing item templates / absent IDs	33,050 / 3
Already rejected by other seller-template filters	32,808
Not rejected by those template filters	242
Of those 242: positive / zero category-quality weight	231 / 11

The main correction

It is not accurate to say this blacklist closes all three named loops. Vendor resale is not stopped by a seller blacklist. Container exclusions can remove the bot-supplied input. Milling is not fully closed: all 15 pigment outputs are blacklisted, but the buyer still values them, and a profitable Silverleaf example remains.

Baseline, not a live-server certification

This uses your uploaded mod_ahbot.conf.txt, saved module source and pinned world database. Per your instruction, no vendor-guard patch is assumed. The optional 15-item guard appears only for comparison, not as active protection. This is not an independent check of your deployed worldserver.

What you receive

An explanatory report followed by the full 33,053-row registry, sorted by item ID with full names, reason labels and effect/status codes. The companion CSV adds all observed overlapping filter reasons and PDF page numbers. Original per-item author intent is not stored in the config; inferred and unverified reasons are labelled rather than invented.

What the three loops really mean

SELLER BLACKLIST $\neq$ BUYER DENYLIST

Loop / mechanism	What this blacklist does	Verdict
1. NPC $\rightarrow$ player $\rightarrow$ buyer bot	Stops the seller bot from generating that ID. Does not stop the buyer considering a player auction.	NOT closed by blacklisting.
2. Bot container $\rightarrow$ open $\rightarrow$ sell contents	Removing the container ID cuts the bot-generated input supply. It does not change contents prices or block player-obtained contents.	Supply-side mitigation for named inputs, not universal conversion safety.
3. Bot herbs $\rightarrow$ mill $\rightarrow$ sell pigments	Pigments are excluded from seller listings; herbs are not. Buyer ignores the pigment blacklist and uses formula values when no override exists.	NOT fully closed; concrete profitable example below.

Where the confusion came from

The README combined “72 items blacklisted” with seven reprices and called four loops closed. Earlier discussion then treated three closures as established. That conclusion was too strong. The final config does not carry a reason/history tag for the alleged 72 additions; the exact historical 72-item change set and its claimed daily gold total are not independently reconstructed here.

Seven reprices are a different control

Changing a valuation can change buyer payments; a seller blacklist does not do that. The seven-item revision table is a separate topic, not proof of seven blacklist fixes. Bountiful Basket (46888) is not blacklisted here and has duration=604800 in this database: the auction handler already rejects such timed items. Its price alone does not establish an auction exploit.

Use accurate terminology

These are pricing/conversion arbitrage or gold-generation opportunities. The reviewed evidence does not demonstrate a literal item-duplication or currency-duplication bug. Also, 1.15 $\times$ is a possible valuation ceiling, not what the buyer always pays.

Why the IDs are excluded

ONE PRIMARY ANALYTICAL LABEL PER ID; OBSERVED REASONS MAY OVERLAP

Reason code	Items	Purpose / limit
BOP	20,656	Progression gear; normally already excluded by binding rule.
QUEST	3,954	Quest/progression isolation; normally already excluded.
GREY	6,907	Keep vendor trash out; quality rule already does this.
TEST	709	Text-filter or inferred internal marker; some matches are broad.
SPECIAL	134	Conjured, temporary, money, empty bag or book rules.
NOPRICE	466	No vendor buy/sell values outside supported exceptions.
VENDOR	52	Vendor-backed catalogue choice; not a buyer protection.
CONTAINER	17	Cuts new bot supply of a loot-bearing item.
PIGMENT	15	Removes pigment supply; does not stop buyer purchases.
SCROLL	74	Enchant-scroll selection; original reason not established.
AMMO	10	Ammunition / legacy throwing selection; cleanup inferred.
REVIEW	56	Explicit choice with no verified specific rationale.
MISSING	3	No matching baseline template; custom/stale intent possible.

Important count correction

The README says 24,004 blacklisted IDs are bind-on-pickup. In the checked item_template, 20,656 have bonding=1 and 3,954 have bonding=4 (quest binding). Those are different fields/states; their sum is 24,610, not 24,004. The old number is not supported by this baseline join.

These categories describe evidence, not recovered intent

A vendor row does not prove an item was blacklisted because of an exploit. A test-like name does not prove the item is invalid. An item with contents is not automatically profitable to open. The CSV retains the objective fields so these judgments can be reviewed.

How much is actually redundant?

COMPARE THE BLACKLIST WITH THE OTHER SELLER FILTERS

32,808 IDs—99.26% of the configured list—also fail at least one built-in seller-template filter in the checked source/settings. That is redundancy in this pipeline, not proof that every entry is pointless or safe to delete.

Registry status	Count	Meaning
DUP	32,808	Another tested seller-template rule would reject the item even without this explicit ID.
ID	231	No tested template-rule rejection and positive category-quality weight. Explicit ID adds an exclusion at this stage.
ZERO	11	No tested template-rule rejection, but category-quality listing weight is already zero.
ABSENT	3	No template at this ID in the checked world DB.

Checked against the actual source block

The exact post-blacklist seller-filter block was extracted, compiled and run against all 33,050 existing blacklisted templates. It confirmed 32,808 rejections and 242 passes. This covers binding, quality, conjured/money/duration/bag/book rules, names, Perfect gems and base-price checks, honouring all nine include exceptions. The configured level/ID restrictions and crafted-item filter are disabled. This is an isolated source-block test, not a full server build.

What “ID” does not mean

It does not guarantee the bot would list the item if unblacklisted. Later drop-rate/listing rules, availability, quotas and runtime conditions may still prevent listing. This is a template-filter comparison, not a live auction simulation.

Should you remove all duplicates? No.

A duplicate list can document policy, provide defence if rules change, or protect a customized fork. Keep progression/test exclusions unless you intentionally change policy. The more useful cleanup is separating reasons into documented groups and reviewing questionable ordinary-item exclusions—not blindly deleting 32,808 IDs.

The buyer is separate

DisabledItems is checked in `PopulateItemCandidatesAndProportions()`, the seller candidate builder. The buyer instead calculates an item value and compares auction prices. It does not consult this ID set. A redundant seller exclusion is therefore not a buyer-side safeguard either.

Vendor resale: updated cross-check

33 OF THE EXPANDED 108 OPPORTUNITIES ARE BLACKLISTED

No patch is assumed. These IDs overlap the current base-price vendor scan after a 5% AH cut. Blacklisting does not close their buyer route. “Optional” below refers only to the proposed vendor-exclusive guard; it is not installed protection.

What changed from the older report

The old 23-of-90 figure was correct for that narrower scan, but is no longer the current cross-reference. The ten added overlap IDs are 2512, 2515, 2516, 2519, 3030, 3033, 4341, 6217, 8343 and 8925. Some opportunities need favourable rolls; the buyer must still complete a sale. The optional guard covers 15 of these 33, leaving 18 outside it.

Containers: where supply blocking helps

248 BLACKLISTED ITEM-LOOT INPUTS; 17 NOT ALREADY REJECTED BY TEMPLATE RULES

The following 17 have item_loot_template entries and would pass the other tested seller-template rules. Their explicit blacklist removes a potential bot-generated container supply. This is the strongest direct blacklist mechanism among the three named loop types. It does not establish that each of the 17 was historically exploitable.

ID	Loot-bearing input
6351	Dented Crate
6352	Waterlogged Crate
6357	Sealed Crate
6643	Bloated Smallfish
6645	Bloated Mud Snapper
6647	Bloated Catfish
8366	Bloated Trout
9265	Cuergo's Hidden Treasure
13874	Heavy Crate
13881	Bloated Redgill
13891	Bloated Salmon
19296	Greater Darkmoon Prize
19297	Lesser Darkmoon Prize
27446	Mr. Pinchy's Gift
35286	Bloated Giant Sunfish
44700	Brooding Darkwater Clam
49926	Brazie's Black Book of Secrets

The other 231 container entries are redundant at this stage

They also fail a binding, money-loot, no-price or another tested seller rule. Their blacklist is not an additional demonstrated closure in the current pipeline.

Limits of the fix

Already-listed bot containers do not vanish merely because an ID is added. Let those auctions expire or manage them deliberately. Players can still obtain containers/contents elsewhere, and the buyer still values the contents. Other unblacklisted containers or conversions require their own audit.

Milling: the actual blacklist contents

45 MILLING INPUT IDS; ZERO BLACKLISTED HERBS; ALL 15 OUTPUTS BLACKLISTED

Milling uses reference loot tables. After resolving those references, the checked database has 45 input IDs and 15 pigment outputs. The blacklist contains all 15 outputs below and none of the 45 inputs. Removing outputs from bot sales does not remove the herb inputs or stop purchases of player-produced pigments.

ID	Blacklisted milling output	Buyer blocked by this blacklist?
39151	Alabaster Pigment	No
39334	Dusky Pigment	No
39338	Golden Pigment	No
39339	Emerald Pigment	No
39340	Violet Pigment	No
39341	Silvery Pigment	No
39342	Nether Pigment	No
39343	Azure Pigment	No
43103	Verdant Pigment	No
43104	Burnt Pigment	No
43105	Indigo Pigment	No
43106	Ruby Pigment	No
43107	Sapphire Pigment	No
43108	Ebon Pigment	No
43109	Icy Pigment	No

Missing overrides do not mean missing buyer prices

These pigments are not zero-valued just because their explicit overrides are absent. `CalculateItemValue` falls back to the runtime formula. The buyer uses that same calculation, regardless of seller-blacklist membership.

A vendor-only guard cannot solve this route

The latest 15-ID vendor-material selection does not include the herbs or pigments. Adding a pigment to a vendor-backed guard would also require an actual vendor row; this is a conversion-pricing issue, not simply an NPC resale issue.

A current milling counterexample

SILVERLEAF → ALABASTER PIGMENT; UPLOADED CONFIG + BASELINE LOOT

Evidence	Value
Silverleaf ID 765: explicit valuation	138c; rolled bot buyout 110–158c per herb.
Five-herb input cost, conservatively rounded upward	At most $5 \times 159c = 795c$ (7s95c) at that buyout range.
Milling reference 11900	100% Alabaster Pigment (39151), quantity 2–4 per milling operation.
Alabaster Pigment runtime valuation	$850c \text{ base} \times 0.8 \text{ class/quality factor} = 680c \text{ centre}$; computed rolled range 544–781c per pigment.
List the minimum two pigments at 5s each	10s total is below the minimum computed buyer budget of 10s88c for two.
Faction AH proceeds after 5% cut	9s50c, exceeding the conservative 7s95c input cost by 1s55c.

What this proves—and what it does not

This is a concrete price/loot counterexample to “milling fully closed.” It does not promise instant purchases, unlimited stock, or a daily gold yield. The buyer must evaluate the auction, be enabled/funded and complete the purchase. It assumes successful sale at the stated price, standard five-herb milling and the faction 5% AH cut. Failed/cancelled auctions can lose deposits; a successful-auction deposit is refundable.

Checked beyond prose

A standalone C++ arithmetic test evaluated every integer roll in the relevant pigment pricing range. The proposed 10s stack buyout stays strictly below the two-pigment budget throughout. This was not a full core build or live-server test.

Correct response to this issue

Review conversion economics across herb inputs and pigment/ink outputs. A deliberate buyer policy or suitable input/output repricing may address it, but can affect legitimate Inscription income. Do not claim that adding more seller-blacklist IDs alone closes the buyer route. No new patch or price changes are applied by this report.

Items that do not prove any gold fix

CATALOGUE CHOICES, DUPLICATES AND UNVERIFIED REASONS

Ordinary cleanup can still be useful

BoP/quest items keep progression rewards out of generated trade. Grey items prevent junk inventory. Conjured/temporary items avoid unsuitable auctions. Test-name rules reduce internal-content clutter. Those are legitimate reasons, but they are not evidence that each entry stops one of the three gold loops.

Some selections deserve a policy review

Example	What can honestly be said
74 enchant-scroll entries	Explicitly selected scrolls are excluded. Exact original rationale and per-item exploit evidence are not available.
Librams 11732/11733/11734/11736/11737 and 18332/18333/18334; Pristine Black Diamond 18335	The source hardcodes these nine as include exceptions, but the blacklist takes precedence. This is a real policy override; its original purpose is unverified.
56 REVIEW-labelled entries	No sufficiently specific reason established from the chosen evidence hierarchy. This is uncertainty, not proof that the items are safe or useless.
57575, 57576, 701000	Absent from this baseline item_template. They have no effect on a missing template here, but may be intentional custom/cross-version exclusions.

Do not confuse the “Do Not Sell List” PDF with the blacklist

That existing document describes items for which the buyer is vendor-capped. A buyer cap and a seller blacklist are different controls. An item can be capped but not blacklisted, blacklisted but not capped, both, or neither.

Recommended documentation structure

Keep separate groups for progression/technical exclusions, catalogue policy, container-input suppression, conversion-pricing controls and buyer guards. Record a reason and evidence for each deliberate new exclusion. Keep claims about measured gold/day or historical “72 exploit items” separate until the before/after data supports them.

How to read the complete registry

EVERY CONFIGURED ID IS INCLUDED ON THE FOLLOWING PAGES

Field / code	Meaning
Why	Short primary analytical reason. Full definitions are in the CSV; counts are in this report. Reasons can overlap.
DUP:rule	Already rejected by that first matching tested seller rule. The CSV records all matching rules.
ID	Explicit ID adds a template-stage exclusion and the category-quality weight is positive. Later listing rules still apply.
ZERO	Category-quality listing weight already zero; explicit blacklist remains policy documentation.
ABSENT	No matching baseline item template.
V-gap	Seller blacklist does not close a vendor opportunity identified in the expanded 108-item scan.
M-gap	Milling output: buyer still values and may buy it.
C-cut	Explicitly cuts new bot supply of a loot-bearing item; per-item profitability unverified.
C-pre	Container input already rejected by another seller-template rule.
N	No direct closure demonstrated by this blacklist entry. This is NOT a claim that the item has no exploit.

Scope and reproducibility

Config: uploaded mod_ahbot.conf.txt (33,053 invalid IDs; custom ID list empty). Source: saved module revision f685832994c825f90aa5a3dc0e1620aa568e875b. World SQL: revision 16685343110115b12e76d517f7bac15c6a97fb2a. The package includes hashes, source-block tests, change notes, the full CSV and a 242-row review extract. The registry is checked one-to-one against all 33,053 configured IDs. Three absent baseline IDs and unverified policy choices are retained, not silently removed.

Suggested honest README wording

“The seller blacklist contains 33,053 explicit IDs, largely progression, technical and catalogue exclusions. Many duplicate built-in seller filters. Selected loot-bearing inputs are suppressed to reduce bot-supplied conversion opportunities. The blacklist is not a buyer denylist and does not by itself close vendor resale or milling. The optional 15-item vendor-material guard is a separate, narrowly scoped buyer control.”
