Scope:

these 13,046 templates are outside the explicit blacklist in the checked database, not a live-auction catalogue. Other tested seller filters reject 1,026; another 162 have zero category-quality listing weight. Passing those stages still does not guarantee a listing. Seller-blacklisted items can also remain buyer-valued, so this is not every item the buyer might purchase.

Prices:

main rows are stored overrides. Buyout draws use approximately 0.80–1.15× the override; starting bids use 0.75–0.95× that drawn buyout, with actual float32 rounding and integer conversion. Bot max / 1 is the highest computed gross allowance for one item, including an initial bid—not guaranteed income or net after fees. A buyout must be strictly below the ordinary budget; bidding can reach the budget. The CSV gives both limits.

Stacks and flags:

budgets scale with count, but * caps use NPC SellPrice for the whole auction, not each stacked item. † means another seller-filter/zero-weight exclusion; ‡ means a timed template, with its actionable buyer maximum suppressed. Buyer funds and other checks still apply. Plain-language symbol guide: page 254.

Rows

How to interpret the source and its limits

Inherited scrape-derived prices; prior statistical analysis points to Warmane's Lordaeron economy.

5,299

Prior statistical analysis compared 3,518 overlapping items with a Lordaeron scan: the comparison scan's prices were a median 1.73× higher, with 57% within a factor of two and a log scatter of 1.06. The pattern was judged most consistent with an earlier scrape from Warmane's Lordaeron economy. This is a statistical attribution, not confirmed collection metadata; prices may differ from your server's economy.

W

Imported/calibrated price category associated with Warmane / Lordaeron data.

3,345

The provenance attribution for W is the AuctionSim dataset (Moloch17/mod-auctionsim): Auctioneer scan snapshots, trimmed medians, class/quality calibration against S, and vendor-multiple limits. The full source-data chain has not been independently authenticated. These are calibrated stored price inputs, not necessarily raw observations or current market prices on your server.

Adjusted price — a revised explicit price override.

7

A identifies seven price entries adjusted to reduce vendor-resale margins. The Centre / ref. column contains the adjusted stored value. The bot uses that value as its override input and applies the configured buyout and bid variations. A is a price-adjustment category, not an observed-market-price label, a blacklist flag, or proof that an exploit is closed.

P

Formula-estimated price saved as an explicit override, rather than calculated afresh at runtime.

4,255

P denotes estimates attributed to vendor SellPrice, quality/category multipliers and advanced-pricing curves, not observed market prices. All 4,255 are stored overrides: the bot varies the saved amount rather than recomputing those curves. They are distinct from the 140 true runtime-fallback entries in the supplement.

Sfx — random stat variants:

Y means the template has a RandomProperty or RandomSuffix setting: 3,322 main entries (1,650 + 1,672). Examples include of the Bear, of the Eagle, of the Monkey, of the Owl, of the Wolf, of the Tiger, of the Whale, of the Boar, of the Gorilla and of the Falcon. These are stat-group names, not separate animal items; each template can roll only variants allowed by its random-property/suffix data, not every example above. The bot assigns the variant before pricing, but its price function reads the base template—not those generated stats. Variants therefore use the same pricing rules/range, although independent rolls can produce different listing prices. Real-player demand may differ by variant. One base-item row covers them; Y does not expand this into a separate price for every suffix.

Price List Supplement — 140 runtime entries

Runtime-priced items • Not blacklisted, but not automatically listable

Why these rows are separate

The main 12,906 rows each have a price written directly in `CompleteItemValueOverride.Items`. These 140 items have no entry there, so the module calculates their prices using its fallback formula. They are separate because their pricing method is different—not because they are automatically invalid, rare or untradeable. Together, the two sections cover 13,046 nonblacklisted templates. See the plain-language supplement guide on page 255.

What the files can—and cannot—tell us

The absence of explicit overrides is verified in the config, but the reason each value was omitted is not recorded. Absence from the override table does not establish that an item never appeared in a market scan, is low-volume, or is obtainable in normal gameplay. Item names and template properties alone do not certify availability or profitability.

Correct runtime prices

These rows are calculated with the actual `CalculateItemValue` and advanced-pricing functions. All possible first-stage integer draws were checked for the 140 fallback cases. The bounds include integer rounding, multipliers, clamping and below-vendor rerolls. As a result, a runtime range is not always exactly $0.80\text{--}1.15\times$ a single centre value.

How to read the columns

Ref. is a deterministic no-variation reference: the initial draw is replaced by the configured base, and any below-vendor replacement uses its floor. It is not an observed market price or necessarily the midpoint of the range. Bot max is the highest computed gross allowance for ONE item, including initial bids. Buyout must be below its ordinary budget. * marks a whole-auction vendor cap; ‡ marks a timed template.

What Seller stage and Note mean

Pass stage means the item clears the tested seller-template filters and has positive listing weight; it does not guarantee a listing. Filtered means another rule blocks bot-generated supply. PERFECT, for example, means the gem name contains the literal text Perfect followed by a space. Of these 140 entries, 123 pass this stage and 17 are filtered. Page 255 explains every note label and why a seller filter is not a buyer ban.

What the symbols mean

A plain-language guide to the price-list flags and stacked auctions.

Symbol	Meaning	What it tells you
* Asterisk	Buyer price cap	The item has a positive vendor-based guard cap. It limits what the bot may pay for the entire auction, even when the auction contains several copies. Do not multiply this cap by the stack count.
† Dagger	Bot seller exclusion	Another tested seller filter—or a zero listing weight—already prevents the bot from generating auctions for this item under the checked settings. It is not an explicit blacklist entry here, and does not automatically stop the bot buying it from players.
‡ Double dagger	Timed item	The template has an expiration duration in the checked database and normally cannot be listed on the AH. Its actionable buyer maximum is shown as —, not as a price suggesting a sale is possible. The dash does not mean the item is free or has no value.

What “stack” means — 20 Lesser Healing Potions

A stack is several copies sold together in one auction. Under your current, unpatched code, an NPC pays 25 copper for one Lesser Healing Potion (858).

Quantity	Sell those potions to an NPC	Bot’s vendor-guard cap
1 potion	25 copper	25 copper for the auction
20 potions in one auction	500 copper (5 silver)	Still 25 copper for the entire auction

The bot’s ordinary valuation scales with the number of items, but this separate guard limit does not. The lower applicable limit controls the purchase. The example shows gross caps before AH fees, not guaranteed payments. “NPC SellPrice” means what an NPC pays you, not what it charges you to buy the item.

Remember: * limits buying; † restricts bot-generated selling; ‡ warns about normal auction eligibility. An item can carry more than one symbol. None promises a purchase: the bot must still evaluate the auction and satisfy pricing, funds and other checks. Real-player bids are not restricted by this bot-specific cap.

Why the 140 items are separate

The difference is how the bot gets the price, not a special class of item.

Section	Where its prices come from
Main list: 12,906 items	Each item has an explicit entry in <code>CompleteItemValueOverride.Items</code> : an item ID paired with a stored copper value. The bot uses that stored value and applies the configured variations.
Supplement: 140 items	These items are not in the explicit seller blacklist, but have no stored price override. The module falls back to its pricing function, using item data, base-price rules, multipliers and variations. The supplement documents those calculated results.

The main section is an export of explicit-price entries; it therefore cannot supply a stored-price row for the other 140. Those are calculated separately. $12,906 + 140 = 13,046$ nonblacklisted templates in the checked baseline—not 13,046 guaranteed bot listings. “Nonblacklisted” only means the ID is absent from the explicit seller blacklist settings.

What “Seller stage” means

Displayed label	Plain-language meaning
pass stage 123 of the 140	The item passes the other tested seller-template filters and has a positive category-quality listing weight. It is a candidate at this point, not a promise that the bot will list it. Later checks, availability, client support and live state still matter.
filtered 17 of the 140	Another seller rule rejects the item even though its ID is not explicitly blacklisted. The Note column identifies that rule. This restricts bot-generated supply; it is not automatically a buyer denylist or a player-auction ban.

What the “Note” labels mean

Note	Meaning
PERFECT 2 entries	The item is a gem whose name contains Perfect (including the space). That specific seller name rule rejects it. It is not a quality rating or a claim about profit. Examples: Perfect Shattered Dark Jade (41474) and Perfect Turbid Dark Jade (41480).
NAME 7 entries	The name matches a pattern in the enabled seller text filter. This is a literal text check—not proof that every similarly named or placeholder-looking item is blocked.
MONEY_LOOT 7 entries	The template has positive minimum money loot. The seller filter rejects it for that reason; the label is not a per-container profitability finding.
Timed: normally AH-ineligible 1 entry	The template has positive duration. The seller duration rule rejects it, and the normal auction handler also bars such timed items. This is stronger than a seller-only exclusion.
Cap per auction	The buyer has a positive vendor guard cap for this item. It limits the entire auction, not each stacked unit. It is a buyer-price note, not a seller rejection.
Blank note	No extra short annotation is shown. A blank cell does not certify availability, safety, profitability or a guaranteed sale.

Do you need to add these 140 overrides? Not merely because they are separate: fallback pricing already handles them. Adding an override changes the calculation path and may change rounding or price ranges. Neither a missing override nor a “pass stage” label is a reason by itself to blacklist an item.
